“ First and foremost Eron was the best brother to grow up with. I was lucky enough to have a best friend named Amy, who he would have rather picked on than me. Eron and I didn't ever fight much, which is weird being so close in age. We always cared about each other and he always looked after me, almost like a guardian angel. Eron you were passionate about a lot of things and didn't stop until you had it all figured out, whether it was collecting something or figuring out a video game. You always had a goal to accomplish and were always searching for something more in life and that was a good thing. I love you Eron, and hopefully you knew that. Eron I just wish I could have had more years with you. I am sad my kids won't get to know you like I knew you. You were such a loving person with a big heart and it hurts me that you are gone. I will tell stories of you and hold you in my heart and mind for as long as I live. Eron I will think of you always as I am growing older and wish you could be here with me in my journey of life. Love always, your sister Keri

“ Growing up down the street and being buddies with Keri, I felt like one of the family growing up. I'm sure we properly horrified Eron playing with his GI Joes along with Barbies. I knew him up through high school as a serious young man focused on finding a good future while looking for fun as well. He was a loyal friend and a great participant in our adventures such as neighborhood tag afterdark. I am so sorry for your loss. Eron is remembered fondly by this friend that grew up down the street.

“ Eron was one of my best friends in high school, and I'll always remember the good times we had. I spent years of my life playing video games with him, and he was great fun to be around. One of my favorite memories was playing Roy Hobbes with him, which was a three man backyard baseball game we'd play with my brother inspired by the movie of the same name. It would usually end with some kind of dispute over the rules, which we pretty much made up as we went, or when the ball-eater bush across the street from our yard claimed our only baseball. Eron was a good friend, and his family and friends have my condolences.
